

NEXTGEN REPORTING

Plaintiff's Attorney Reduces Time to Case Resolution by 10 Months With Remote Video Depositions

Background: In August 2010, Mark Sophocles, a Philadelphia attorney litigating an automobile accident, needed the plaintiff, defendant and opposing counsel to meet for a few hours of depositions. Unfortunately, the plaintiff was in South Carolina, the defendant was in Virginia, and both attorneys were based in Philadelphia. The parties determined that they would not be able to meet in person until June 2011.

To accelerate the process, Mr. Sophocles turned to NextGen Reporting to connect the parties through streaming video; the remote deponents participated from their homes while Mr. Sophocles and his opposing counsel examined the witnesses from his office in suburban Philadelphia. NextGen's court reporter conducted both depositions from Mr. Sophocles' office.

*"NextGen didn't change the result,
but we got there 10 months faster.
My client thinks I'm a hero."
- Mark Sophocles, Esq.*

Accelerated Resolution: By enabling the parties to meet earlier, NextGen reduced the time to resolve of the case by 10 months.

In addition, NextGen saved both the plaintiff and defendant approximately $1,200 each by eliminating the travel time ... not to mention the days wasted by travel.

No Special Equipment: As a solo practitioner, Mr. Sophocles appreciated how NextGen's service required no special equipment or technical work for his staff. NextGen managed the video streams from his office. In addition, NextGen delivered the microphones and cameras to the remote attendees in advance and helped them connect to the deposition.

*"NextGen made it so easy. My secretary called them, and they handled all the details."
- Mark Sophocles, Esq.*

Conclusion: With NextGen's help, Mr. Sophocles resolved his case 10 months faster and saved $1,200 in travel costs. His client was very pleased. Call NextGen at 215.944.5800 to discuss the ways you can accelerate your discovery and maximize the value of your time.